Stetten, Switzerland, June 02, 2021 - Exentis Group AG, solution provider in Industrialized Additive Manufacturing, has grown profitably in the first five months of the financial year.

Exentis has won numerous new development projects during the current fiscal year, finalized two additional licensing agreements, and received orders and made deliveries of numerous Exentis 3D development and production systems.

As a result, profitable sales of over nine million Swiss francs were generated in the first five months. This revenue is higher than the total revenue of the best year so far in 2018. Therefore, the 2021 financial year is expected to be the most successful year in the corporate history of Exentis.

Klaus Radakovics, CFO of Exentis Group AG: “The achieved performance demonstrates the attractiveness of large-scale additive manufacturing for our customers in Switzerland and abroad. In July, we will report the promising revenue and earnings figures for the first half of 2021.”

About Exentis

As a solution provider, Exentis offers large-scale production of components with free choice of materials and ultra-fine geometries. Industrialized Additive Manufacturing creates a new level of flexibility in 3D manufacturing processes and replaces time-consuming and costly tooling production when using established manufacturing technologies. Exentis optimizes the entire process chain from the development project to the industrial production of millions of components for the application fields of industrial e-mobility, fuel cells or med-tech, among others. This enables the customer to decide between production of the components at Exentis or in-house production with a manufacturing licence when purchasing the Exentis 3D development and production systems.
